

Janet's Plan-its Day Ratings Introduction

These tables created by Janet Booth display her Janet's Daily Plan-its day ratings for each month. Days are rated on a scale 1 – 5, with 5 being the easiest, smoothest planetary energy down to 1 being the most difficult or challenging. An occasional P indicates that day is a more potent or powerful version of its day rating (multiple important planetary happenings are occurring).

A “4” is not a “5” just as a “2” is not a “1.” There could be a challenging aspect on a “4” day, just not as many nor as strong as on a “3” day. A “5” day is pretty much challenge-free. If there is a negative aspect, it is not aggravated by additional adverse aspects. A “1” might have a stray positive occurrence unsupported by other positive ones and not enough to raise the rating to a “2.” A “3” day, while better than a “1” or “2,” is not a “4” or “5” and is by no means free of difficulties. Sometimes the easy and hard influences alternate and there’s not even a better (or worse) time of day. Other days, there is a good period and that is usually pointed out in the daily messages posted at the top of the homepage at AstrologyBooth.com and in the free Janet's Plan-its morning emails (sign up in the footer of any page on the website). A “P” is assigned when there are multiple connections between planets, usually reinforced by lunar aspect to these. It means what happens that day is more consequential.

Janet's Plan-its Day Ratings apply to the time zones in the Americas. They are assigned considering planetary connections occurring during normal waking hours in Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific time zones and, more marginally, in the Atlantic, Alaska and Hawaii-Aleutian zones. They ignore what happens in the wee hours, which are morning hours in Europe. Do not assume these day ratings are applicable “across the pond.”

Feel free to print these tables and use them to your advantage. You might like to write the ratings on whatever calendar you use. Realize that portions of many days have a condition called Moon Void of Course, a time of energy fizzling out when it’s best not to begin new activities or make major purchases or decisions. When choosing your times to take action, be aware of this! The time when a Void begins is listed in most astrological calendars. The Void ends when the Moon changes into the next sign. You can also find lists of the Moon’s Void times online. A good source is CafeAstrology’s Timing with the Moon page (the Moon Void info is way down at the bottom of the page, after some great explanations).

These are offered freely. However, if you are so moved, you can make a donation to show your appreciation (see the button in the footer below).
